"Biggest Bank—Littlest Town"

"Speaking of banks; we have recently heard that Hyde Park, the home of Senator Page, carries the honorable distinction of having the largest bank in the world for a village of its size.

"Such an exceptional thing is distinctive and it is worthy of mention. To us it has not been known until now that such distinction has come to Vermont.

"Of course it did not come to this State and neighborhood without reason. In fact it came through hard work, good management, careful and honest dealing. In brief, it attained that distinction by 'pluck, perseverance, persistence—and printer's ink.'—Burlington Daily News.

Thanks to the News for the very pleasant compliments extended to Lamoille county. We think the report that the News says it has recently heard that "Hyde Park, the home of Senator Page, carries the honorable distinction of having the largest bank in the world for a village of its size," is unquestionably correct.

If anybody is curious enough to take the time to investigate the matter and finds that it isn't true, we will make our humble apologies.

What strikes us in the above statement of the News as being particularly pertinent and happy is that it has diagnosed so correctly what we think are the true reasons why Hyde Park enjoys this unique distinction.

As a rule, things don't come in this world unless there is a reason for their coming. The farmer who has the best dairy of cows is the one who is everlastingly vigilant to see that his cows are well bred and have good care.

The best lawyer is usually the one who has been the most diligent, painstaking and persistent in studying the underlying principles of law.

The News is unquestionably right when it says that the growth of the Hyde Park Bank came through hard work, good management and careful and honest dealing. We doubt if any man ever gave to a financial institution more vigilant, painstaking, tireless attention than have its managers given to the Hyde Park Bank.

Their motto from the beginning has been "Absolute safety first." High rates of interest have never tempted them to accept a weak loan. In other words, they have deserved the confidence of the people of Vermont, and the people of Vermont have, on their part, reciprocated that confidence by making the Hyde Park Bank the depository of their savings.

Four per cent, with taxes of every kind paid—and that is what the Hyde Park Bank pays—is as high as a bank can afford to pay if it confines its investments to strictly first-class paper and makes "Absolute safety first" its motto.

The fact that it is perfectly safe now to send money by registered letter, check, or postal money order, has resulted in deposits coming to the Hyde Park Bank from every county and almost every town in the state, and from almost every state in the Union.

If anyone would like to know more about the Hyde Park Bank, they will receive prompt information by addressing the President, Carroll S. Page, or the Treasurer, F. M. Culver, Hyde Park, Vermont.—News and Citizen.

War Maneuver of 1812.

One hundred years ago a British force landed on the Massachusetts coast and attacked the little village of Wareham. Earlier in the year the British squadron, which for many months had maintained a strict blockade along the New England coast, had commenced active operations by sending an expedition up the Connecticut river. Now the enemy's depredations were extended to the Massachusetts coast. Wareham and the town of Scituate were the first sufferers. A sudden descent made by boats' crews from the frigates Superb and Nimrod so completely surprised the inhabitants that the enemy burned the shipping at the wharves, looted the shops and returned to their vessels before the bewildered villagers had time to take any measures for defense.

Invisible Aeroplanes.

A German engineer has invented for military use an aeroplane that is virtually invisible. According to the engineer, the wings of this novel aeroplane are made, not of the usual cloth fabric or other visible material, but of a transparent celluloid that is said to be quite fireproof. These transparent wings have two advantages: The aeroplane can hardly be seen at all when half a mile in the air, and the aviator has an unobstructed view in every direction. The motor of the new aeroplane is fitted with a silencer, so that the machine is not only invisible, but virtually noiseless.

Gulf Stream's Giant Flow.

Ninety billion tons of water are carried hourly through the Florida straits by the gulf stream, according to Rear Admiral John E. Pillsbury, U. S. N., retired, formerly chief of the bureau of navigation and the greatest authority on the gulf stream, in a letter to the National Geographic society. The gulf stream, he said, is probably the grandest and most mighty of the terrestrial phenomena.

Midnight Golf.

Golf fans in England are so afraid they will miss a game that midnight golf has come into vogue. This is made possible by auto headlights. In a game which took place at Bushey hall each of the four players was attended by a "lamp caddy." The rays of the lamp were trained on the direction to be taken by the ball. Many of the holes were done in bogey or less.
